September 2013

Welcome back, to school! We are now well into the new school year and it has been a great few weeks seeing all of our continuing families and welcoming our new ones. The transition can be a difficult one on both parents and kids (check out our blog posts "Transition Time" and "A New Day" from the first week of school). But last week's apple picking field trips went wonderfully well with manzanas (apples) and calabazas (pumpkins) and hay rides, and were enjoyed by all. What a perfect start to the year.

Survey Says...

Last spring we conducted a survey of our parents in order to get your feedback. The survey was sent to 400 currently enrolled families; we received 100 responses. The feedback we received is priceless and offers us invaluable insight into how things are working in our schools - even negative feedback is important as it helps us understand where we can improve - and we thank everyone who responded. We take your comments and suggestions very seriously and strive to address and improve on every aspect that has been noted. To read more, please see the full report on our blog.

We very much hope that you'll contact us directly if you have any additional questions or comments, or would like to talk further about anything. We look forward to connecting with you throughout the year.

Best,

Emma, Brid, and all of your friends at Pine Village
